His bestselling detective novels are being turned into a movie series that will make him a household name and he's rubbing a lot more than just elbows with Hollywood's elite. Money, fame and good looks mean an endless supply of men, both groupies and celebrities alike, which suits Gray just fine. Army Ranger Luke Monroe lives and breathes the military. They're the family he never had and a life without his brothers-in-arms is unfathomable. But the ultimate betrayal has Luke on the run and a twist of fate leads him to the small town of Dare, Montana to seek help from the foster brother who saved him once before. Only the brother he's searching for isn't the man he finds and he has no choice but to keep running. Until an encounter on the side of the road with a stranger changes everything.

The last thing Gray wants when he seeks refuge at his cabin in the secluded Montana mountains is company but a run-in with the mysterious and very straight Luke has Gray offering the damaged soldier a place to regroup. And since a physical relationship isn't even on the table, Gray finds himself enjoying something he hasn't had in a long time...a real friend.

But what happens when friendship just isn't enough? When a man who's only been with women begins to crave more?

With one man running from his past and the other running from his future, will finding each other be enough to bring them peace?

This book is best of the this series for me

By A. D.

Received an ARC in exchange for an honest review.

This book is best of the this series for me. I've already done a re-read and I just got my copy yesterday :) I like my romance filled with big emotional moments and plenty of angst (but not too much) and this one had the perfect balance. While there were some dark reveals from Luke and Gray's (individual) pasts, it never felt too heavy to read through. The HEA felt earned and was wonderful to experience at the end of their story.

Big fan of this author, and I've read all of her other stories which I all LOVE. Looking forward to Roman's story next!

By JJ's Aunty

I have loved every single book I have read by this author and this one is no different.

The journey that these two, Luke and Gray take is filled with heartache and sorrow but there is also love and a couple who are just perfect together.

I can't recommend this book highly enough but I will say that you must read all these books you will not be disappointed.
