1 Corinthians 9:21 states, "I have become all things to all people." That is what we have to do as teachers....

Teachers are challenged every day to educate students with vastly different learning capabilities, preferences, and interests. How does a teacher cater to all these unique learning needs while achieving school administrative goals and helping students pass standardized tests? The answer is differentiated instruction: adapting teaching methods to each individual student.

GUIDE to Differentiated Instruction for Christian Educators addresses how the Great Commission and teaching are unified through differentiated instruction. Teachers need to reach all students, including the diverse and struggling learners. Beth Ackerman uses her experiences as a grade-school teacher, principal, professor, and associate dean to encourage teachers and provide strategies for implementing differentiated instruction in their classroom.

Quick Read, packed with useful ideas

By Thomas Norton

This book was required reading. It was organized, thought provoking and contained many good ideas for the classroom. Suggested learning activities apply mainly to elementary age, but can be idea resources to apply to older students. Appropriate challenge Scripturally to consider and support the needs of all students facing learning difficulties.

Excellent!

By Lory

Dr. Ackerman did a wonderful job of providing easy-to-read Bible-based information on reaching struggling learners. My favorite part was the multiple examples of differentiation she included, along with explanations on how to incorporate them and diagrams to illustrate them.
