The City Poet

By Logan L. Braasch

Living at the Movies surely proves that Jim Carroll is one of the most creative poets of our time. These collective poems were written from his Basketball Diaries period (1960s), and from his Forced Entries period (1970s).

"Jim Carroll has the sure confidence of a true artist....He is steeped in his craft. He had worked as only a man of inspiration is capable of working...His beginning is a triumph."

-Gerard Malnga.

This book was originally published in 1973, and was the first aboveground publication of Jim Carroll's work in poetry. He shows uncanny virtuosity. His power and poison are reminiscent to Arthur Rimbaud, and one of the strongest forfeiting books of poems in the New York period. In language he deals with his pains and pleasures: The city, love, hope, rebellion, menacing, and friendship. These poems emerge in the manical city, Jim Carroll is not afraid to push the edge, he has transformed from a New York street punk to a litlural artist.

Another NYC 70s classic

By Eric Orsolics

Wm. Burrough's said that Morrison was the next Rimbaud, I agree with him, but Jim Carroll was a , and is a close second alternative poetry and prose

By Stephanie Hiteshew

Classic of the late Jim C. Love it. Think it is better for over 18 yr old readers due to drug references which are very powerful.
