Nothing new - just a marketing blurb for his products

By Anyman

I have just finished reading Dr Coldwell's book, The Only Answer to Cancer, and I feel I would be remiss if I did not add my review.

The cures for cancer Dr Coldwell mentions have been in books and on the internet, some of them for many years already - therefore, he adds absolutely nothing new to the alternative information which is already available on the internet. Not only does he mention these (many of them) well known (by those of us who have been researching the subject of alternative health for years - in my case, for about forty years) treatments, he repeats the same information page after page after page after page, ad nauseam - so much so, that this 320 page book could very easily have been 20 pages without losing any information.

The information Dr Coldwell shares indicting the medical profession and the pharmaceutical giants, is also old hat for those who have been researching this topic - there are many, many books on this subject and absolutely reams of information online. So, again, nothing new, nothing original.

Dr Coldwell says that there are hundreds (he repeatedly says, 300) cures for cancer out there, and that they work - but, according to him, they address the symptoms not the cause, therefore, after they have wiped out the cancer, it will simply come back at some later stage - that is, unless we follow his unique protocol, which is to address the root cause, which is stress - the stress of a bad marriage, low self esteem, etc. The damaging effects of stress have been known and written about for decades - about 80 years ago, Edgar Cayce, for example warned about the damage that psychological stress does to one's health, as have many others since then - so, once again, nothing new.

So, what has Dr Coldwell got to say that is new and original? Well, if you expect to find anything new and original in his book, you are in for a disappointment, because the book is simply a marketing blurb to convince you that he has something unique to offer, and that something unique is in the form of various CD sets, starting at $99 per set. These CDs are supposed to relax you from the stress that is causing your illness, and by some modern, technological, recording and encoding process, ensure that this stress goes away for good. And mind you, according to him, nothing else works - all the companies that have been doing encoding with light and sound machines for decades, have apparently been wasting their time, as only his technology works - are there independent studies to compare these technologies and prove his claims? If there were, don't you think he would present them - I do.

And to make this a very irritating read (for me, in any event) everything is hyped and overhyped and then overhyped again - from the book title, the ONLY answer to cancer - only his patented system works, while hypnosis, NLP and the rest of the modalities used and proven for decades, are all just band aids, which address the symptoms, but not the cause - the only protocol that addresses the cause, is Dr Coldwell's - wait, didn't I say that already? Well, let me repeat that over and over for 320 pages, then you will get a feel of what this book is like.

Another thing making this an extremely irritating read (again, for me) is that on every page there are advertisements for his other products and those of his associates (or of his own, under different names) - on many pages there are 6-7 or more links where the reader can click and order anything from supplements to water purifiers.

I have a suggestion: For those who want to order his CDs for $99 - don't bother to order the book, just go ahead and order the CDs, because you will find zero information about them in the book - he will just tell you that they are amazing and the only thing out there that can cure you.

So, in a nutshell, if you would like to know what the message of the book is, what the only answer to cancer is, according Dr Coldwell, here it is: "The only answer to cancer is: Order my set of CDs for $99 or more."

Oh, by the way, Leonard Coldwell is an associate of Kevin Trudeau, who claims to speak with aliens, and when asked what they look like, he said, "They look just like you and me" - Well, I see one of them in the mirror every morning when I shave, but I don't usually speak with him until I've had my first cup of coffee. Trudeau also claims to be able to speed up the vibration of his DNA or some such feat - and exactly like his friend Leonard Coldwell, he claims that nothing else will work for you - you can try hypnosis, NLP and all the rest, but if you cannot alter your basic vibration, you will simply be wasting your time. Isn't it just marvellous how each of these two has the exact same modus operandi? Each one knows things and can do things that no normal mortal can do - but for a price he can teach you how. Each one makes the most outlandish claims which are so overhyped that you think, "This must be true - no one would dare tell lies of such a magnitude", and each one has that one single answer - that foolproof, failsafe answer to all your problems. What is that saying about birds of a feather? I am embarrassed to admit that I fell for this hype and bought this book.

Dishonest book

By James Wilson

I would not recommend this book because the material in it is very dishonest. People who are making decisions on how to fight their cancer deserve to get information that is truthful. Coldwell takes the attitude of "just trust me." He even has a trademark quote: "Its only my opinion--but I might right!" (page 33).

This book is packed full of misleading information, but I picked two things that stand out:

Coldwell's headline marketing boast is he has cured 35,000 people from cancer at a 92.3% success rate. We know this is false by using simple arithmetic. How many people does he cure every day? 20? Is he a 500-year old elf? And if his boast were true, he should be the doctor of the century and have his picture on the cover of every major publication. I would dare anyone to find any information about Coldwell or his self-reported success that does not come from his own advertising.

Coldwell also claims his curing rate is legendary in Europe and he is known as the number one leading alternative doctor in the continent. He lists 6 German clinics that he recommends cancer patients go to because they use the techniques that he advocates. I decided to contact these German clinics and find out if they know Coldwell and if they use his techniques. These are supposedly the guys that are on his side. Three of them were kind enough to reply:

Dear Dr. Wilson

Working in the field of alternative medicine for more than 15 years. I have not heard anything about a Dr. Coldwell as a holistic and alternative doctor in Europe. Also there is nothing known and available about legendary curing rates after treatments of patients in Europe.

If doctor Coldwell was that famous in Europe I would know him, because I know most of the alternative specialists, some of them even personally from different meetings.

Also the name Leonard Coldwell does not sound German at all.

I believe it is very important to help cancer patients to find the right path which includes alternative treatments as well as conventional treatments. The aim should be to guide the patient to the best possible results what ever method may be helpful.

General promises of curing rates higher than 90 % in cancer are not helpful at all. They may be understood as false promises offering to treatments without much benefit there is the risk of loosing important time.

What is your intention? Are you interested in treatments available in Germany or are you just generally interested in medicine and alternative medicine?

I hope I could help you.

If you have more questions please let me know.

With best regards

Dr. med. Alexander Herzog

Dear J. Wilson,

Many thanks for your e-mail. I can give you no closer information about Dr. Coldwell. To me is only known that he has written the named book. Maybe you can get in contact yourselves with Dr. Coldwell.

Kind regards

Dr. med. AXEL WEBER

Dear Mr. Wilson,

thank you for your email. We don' know anything about Dr. Coldwell. We have never worked with him and we didn't ever heard about a cancer therapy in related to him. 93% succes rate seems be exaggerated. If someone would achieve this succes rate, he would be very famous. As I said, we have never heard about him.

Yours sincerely

Informative and helpful.

By Big Sky 77

The writing style in this book is not the most professional I have seen. It skips around a lot and repeats a lot. YET, the basic information is superb. The stories about cancer victims well worth the read. A lot can be learned from this book.. BTW, it is NOT about a single cancer cure. The title can be a bit misleading. the book really shows the author to be extremely caring man who has endured most of his family with cancer. Many years of knowledge came from wanting to save his mother as a young boy. AND HE DID.. Unknown information is revealed..
